

Working with Muslim Families

This 1-day training course will equip practitioners to work effectively with Muslim families. Based on the well-established Nurturing Programme and its Parenting Puzzle and Islamic Values book, the course specifically considers how positive parenting strategies relate to Islamic values and religious teaching. The programme draws on extracts from the Quran and the sayings (hadiths) of the Prophet Mohammed. There is an opportunity to discuss the differences between parenting styles based on cultural norms and practices, and the approach supported both by Islam and the Nurturing Programme. Guidance will be offered on the most effective way to engage families and affect positive outcomes for adults, children and young people.

Aims of the training:

- To develop a wider understanding of Islamic values in relation to family life
- To understand the difference between cultural and religious practices
- Consider successful, respectful approaches to working with Muslim families
- To develop an understanding of the Parenting Puzzle approach

Each delegate will receive a copy of the booklet 'Islamic Values and the Parenting Puzzle'. This helpful resource draws on extracts from the Quran and the hadiths. It is endorsed by the Muslim Law Council and the Muslim College.
